

CHURCH LEADERS

Homes in This City of Three Ecclesiastical Dignitaries.

AN ARCHBISHOP AND TWO BISHOPS

Centers of Interest for Episcopalians, Methodists and Catholics.

MEN OF INFLUENCE

THE FORMATION of the diocese of Washington out of the old diocese of Maryland had as one of its desirable results the addition to this city of another high church dignitary in the person of Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee. Bishop John H. Hurst of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been a resident of Washington for a number of years, and the coming of Archbishop Martinelli, representative of the pope in the United States, to succeed Cardinal Sallati, raises the number of episcopal homes in this city to three.

The centering here of so much of the influence and dignity of high church officials has been watched with considerable interest by all classes of people regardless of their religious beliefs. It would hardly do to say that this is but the forerunner of more of the same sort of thing, for it is foolish to prophesy what the future may bring forth along such lines; but certainly the presence here of three such men as Archbishop Martinelli, Bishop Hurst and Bishop Satterlee is in itself an element in the life of the capital that cannot but impress even the casual observer.

Men of Influence.
Of the personal life of Archbishop Martinelli comparatively little is known as yet in Washington, for while he has lived on this side of the Atlantic in other years he has been here such a short time since his elevation to the post of papal delegate that he has not yet become as familiar a figure as was his predecessor. As a matter of course he has taken the residence of the delegation, on I street, and life there has gone on pretty much the same as it did under the regime of the first delegate. Bishop Hurst, on the contrary, is one of the best known residents of Washington and few men have a larger circle of personal friends and acquaintances. His position as the American University has brought him into still further prominence, and in many matters that go to advance the welfare of the community he has taken a lively and influential part.

Although Bishop Satterlee has been a resident of Washington only since last spring, his position as the first bishop of the new diocese has already made him a noticeable figure. He is a man of strong personality, there is no doubt of that, and if there were the record of his work in New York would dispel it. As the rector of Calvary Church he showed remarkable executive ability and the mission work that was conducted by that parish placed it in the front rank of active and successful parishes.

The Officials.

The recent announcement of his choice of St. Mark's Church as a pro-cathedral has been the subject of a deal of discussion among Episcopalians, who see in his action reason for the belief that he is going to lose as little time as possible in putting some of his ideas into actual practice. St. Mark's has not been particularly outstanding during the last few years as its friends would like to see it, and doubtless the bishop's principal reason in fixing upon that church as the pro-cathedral was that he has his desire to make it in some respects the model parish. It is not a case of trying all sorts of experiments on the parish to see whether they are successful or not, but simply the wish on the bishop's part to make a strong, militant parish out of one that has been involved in various difficulties.

Organizing a New Diocese.

Following shortly upon the death of Rev. Dr. Addison, the rector of Trinity Church, a cordial invitation was extended to the bishop to accept that church as the cathedral of the new diocese. The bishop held out the statement that Trinity, being a down-town parish and a large one, would be a splendid field for the very work for which he had been selected as rector of Calvary.

HOUSE OF ARCHBISHOP MARTINELLI.

Shortly after the arrival of Archbishop, now Cardinal Sallati, in this city, a search was made for a desirable home for the representative of the pope in the United States. It was not long before the house at the northwest corner of 22 and I streets was selected as the most suitable. The house of Cardinal Sallati and the coming of Archbishop Martinelli has, of course, resulted in no change of location, for the residence of the bishop of the Catholic Church some time ago.

The house is a very large one. It is a square structure, devoid of any external ornamentation, but to the corner house of a row which has probably sheltered as many prominent men as any other in the city, and it has been the home of many of the city's most prominent men. BISHOP HURST'S HOUSE.

"He is a young New Yorker," said Mr. Gladstone, "who has taken a double life at Oxford, and was the man of his year at the university."

"And his name?"

"Mr. Rhinelanders."

"I have secured him already," said Bishop Satterlee, "he is to take charge of St. Alban's Church."

Rev. Mr. Rhinelanders is a member of one of the best-known New York families, and is looked upon as a man of great promise and ability. He was ordained by Bishop Satterlee in New York within the past week.

Interview With the Czar.

During his summer abroad Bishop Satterlee was living in the vicinity of a place where the Czar of Russia was staying. The latter sent word that he would like to see the bishop, and when Bishop Satterlee called on the autocrat of all the Russias he was treated with the greatest deference and the warmest of hospitality.

Where Science ends and Common Sense should rule.

Persons of sedentary habits are liable to indigestion or dyspepsia. These, in turn, will bring on nervous disorders, kidney complaints, constipation, etc. This is especially the case with merchants, students and scientists. They will give you the exact dimensions of Jupiter, the distance from Saturn to the sun, to a foot, but they cannot or will not tell themselves what will cure this train of disorders.

For ailments resulting from sedentary habits—inactivity of the liver, habitual constipation, etc.—the entire medical fraternity of Europe and America almost unanimously recommend the genuine Carlsbad Sprudel Salt and the Waters of Carlsbad.
